

Los Angeles Basin Geological Society

Scholarships Available

To Interested Faculty and Students:

The Los Angeles Basin Geological Society (LABGS) is a non-profit professional society associated with the Pacific Section of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists (PSAAPG). Our members include geologists, hydrogeologists, geochemists and others in private industry and academia in the greater Los Angeles area. Many of our members are employed with academia, the energy industry, and the environmental industry.

In the last couple of years, LABGS has established a scholarship program through the PSAAPG Educational Foundation. This scholarship program is to assist undergraduate and graduate students in the geological and earth sciences within our regional area with their educational needs.

This year, our scholarship program plans to award up to six scholarships ranging in amounts from $500 to $1500. The awards will be based on merit and need and awarded to selected undergraduate and graduate students that meet our eligibility requirements. The awarded money must be used to advance the student's education in geology and the related earth sciences. It may be used for tuition at a public California college system school – including Summer Geology field camp; undergraduate research and graduate research.

Eligibility:

- Current student in good standing in the California public college system in LABGS sphere of influence ie. CSU-LB, LA, SD; UCLA, UCI etc. The sphere of influence of LABGS is Los Angeles County, Orange County, and San Diego County.
- Student enrolled in a 4-year program leading to a BA or BS degree or in a Graduate program leading to a MS or Ph.D. degree.

- Student must have a ‘B’ average or above in the geological sciences or similar.
